

From the law school's leaders

YOUNG ALUMNI/ALUMNAE COMMITTEE

PREPARE:

"Many of us can trace our professional success back to one thing – our legal education. The UGA School of Law helped to prepare us for the challenge of practicing law and serving our greater society. As a center of learning excellence, your law school continues to evolve and produce quality lawyers and thought leaders by creating new learning opportunities and platforms with an eye toward remaining an excellent return on investment.

Help prepare tomorrow's legal professionals by supporting your law school."

—Catherine H. Curlet (J.D.'11), Young Alumni/Alumnae Committee President

LAW SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

CONNECT:

"As the leader of the Law School Association, which includes more than 10,000 graduates, I encourage you to connect with your future colleagues and business partners. Building personal and professional relationships with current students and recent grads is so very important – not only for these new attorneys but for the future of our noble profession.

Find a way to make an authentic and meaningful Law Dawg connection today."

—C. Andrew "Andy" Childers (J.D.'98), Law School Association President

BOARD OF VISITORS

LEAD:

"As graduates of the UGA School of Law, which is regularly recognized as one of the nation's top law schools, our alums establish themselves as leaders in the legal profession, in their communities and across industry, public service, the political arena and the judiciary. Our students receive a first-class education by an esteemed faculty of thought leaders across all fields. Through the generosity of committed supporters, the School of Law has been aggressively working to reduce the aggregate indebtedness of its student body by nearly $1 million annually. This ongoing effort bolsters your school's ranking as a best value law school and increases the return on investment for our law students.

Join us by investing in the next generation of legal leaders."

—Kathelen V. Amos (J.D.'82), Board of Visitors Chair
