1859-1860 YEARS OF LEADERSHIP 2009-2010

Hosch Professor of Law

This academic year, the University of Georgia School of Law will celebrate a significant milestone – its 150th anniversary, placing Georgia Law among the oldest law programs affiliated with a university or college in our country. Since officially opening its doors in October 1859, the School of Law has prided itself on the quality of the legal education it provides.

The face of legal education has greatly evolved over the past 15 decades. However, its two central elements have remained the same – dedicated and talented faculty teaching engaged and intelligent students. While entering student academic credentials continue to climb at Georgia, so does faculty performance as teachers and scholars.

Recently, five Georgia Law professors received new titles or were granted tenure, while three were recognized on the national stage for their contributions to the broader legal community. We have also hired two new faculty members who will enhance our curricular offerings.

Our faculty continues to produce scholarship that addresses pressing issues in today's society. Faculty articles have appeared or are forthcoming in law journals associated with top universities such as Chicago, Fordham, Georgetown, Indiana (Bloomington), Minnesota (Twin Cities), Northwestern, Pennsylvania, Stanford, Texas, Vanderbilt and Virginia. In addition, faculty books have been published or are forthcoming from the Harvard University Press, the University of Pennsylvania Press, Aspen Publishers and Thomson/West, among others.

Georgia Law continues to attract high-profile speakers and guests. Visitors in the past two years have included five former U.S. Secretaries of State – Madeleine Albright, James Baker III, Warren Christopher, Henry Kissinger and Colin Powell – former U.S. Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, former U.S. Sen. Wyche Fowler Jr., former U.S. Secretary of Education Shirley Mount Hufstедler and the Chief Justice of the Indian Supreme Court K.G. Balakrishnan. This year, we look forward to welcoming the former Chief Justice of the Georgia Supreme Court Leah Ward Sears, the Delaware Court of Chancery Chancellor William B. Chandler III, former U.S. Attorney General W. Ramsey Clark and former U.S. Attorney David C. Iglesias.

The accomplishments of our alumni further demonstrate the quality of the legal education provided at Georgia Law. Four out of the last five years, a Georgia Law graduate has been selected to serve as a judicial clerk for the U.S. Supreme Court. Also, several of our former students have entered the legal academy, with two more joining the law school faculty ranks this fall. This, of course, is all in addition to the scores of alumni who have distinguished themselves in the practice of law, in the corporate sector or in public service, including on the federal and state benches.

With 150 years of pride and tradition, Georgia Law has a remarkable record. I invite you to spend a few moments with this publication to learn more about why the University of Georgia School of Law is one of the leading public law schools in our country today.

from the dean

J. Randy Beck

Professor of Law

B.A., Baker University

J.D., Southern Methodist University

J. Randy Beck, who has been a member of the Georgia Law faculty since 1997, was recently promoted to the rank of full professor. He teaches Property, Trusts and Estates, Constitutional Law, and Christian Perspectives on Legal Thought.

Before joining the teaching academy, Beck worked for more than five years as a general litigation associate with the law firm Perkins Coie in Seattle, Wash., and as an attorney-advisor in the U.S. Department of Justice's Office of Legal Counsel. He also served as a judicial clerk for U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony M. Kennedy and Judge Patrick E. Higginbotham of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit.

He is the author of "Gonzales, Casey and the Viability Rule" in the Northwestern University Law Review, "The Essential Holding of Casey: Rethinking Viability" in the UMKC Law Review, "Christian Faith and Political Life: A Dialogue" in the Georgia Law Review and "The Heart of Federalism: Pretext Review of Means-End Relationships" in the University of California at Davis Law Review, among others. A dedicated teacher as well as scholar, Beck has received numerous awards and recognitions from the law school's student body.

After earning his undergraduate degree from Baker University, Beck graduated first in his class from the Southern Methodist University Dedman School of Law.

“ I really enjoy seeing improvement in student comprehension of difficult material. It's fun to watch students begin to 'get it' as we work through challenging topics like the Rule Against Perpetuities, congressional power under the 14th Amendment or intestate succession under the Uniform Probate Code. ”

new titles

Lonnie T. Brown Jr.

Professor of Law
B.A., Emory University
J.D., Vanderbilt University

Lonnie T. Brown Jr. has been elevated to the rank of full professor. Teaching in the areas of civil procedure, legal profession, ethics in litigation and conflict of laws, he has served at Georgia Law since 2002. For the 2008–09 academic year, Brown served as a UGA Administrative Fellow, working in the Office of the Provost.

Prior to joining UGA, Brown was an assistant professor at the University of Illinois College of Law, a visiting assistant professor at Vanderbilt University and an adjunct professor at Emory University. He has also served as a judicial clerk for Judge William C. O’Kelley of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia and practiced law as an associate and partner at Alston & Bird in Atlanta from 1991 to 1999.

Currently, Brown is conducting biographical research regarding former U.S. Attorney General W. Ramsey Clark. His scholarship has appeared in such publications as the Ohio State Law Journal, the Review of Litigation, the Georgia Law Review and the Yale Biographical Dictionary of American Law, to name a few. Brown is a member of the AALS Committee on Bar Admission and Lawyer Performance as well as a member of the ABA’s Center for Professional Responsibility and the Association of Professional Responsibility Lawyers.

He earned his bachelor’s degree from Emory University, where he was a Robert W. Woodruff Scholar, and his Juris Doctor from Vanderbilt University, where he was a Patrick Wilson Scholar and editor in chief of the Vanderbilt Journal of Transnational Law.

“ I hope I can help my students realize the tremendous good that they can accomplish with their legal education and inspire them to act on that realization throughout their careers. ”

Erica J. Hashimoto

Associate Professor of Law
A.B., Harvard University
J.D., Georgetown University

Erica J. Hashimoto became a member of the Georgia Law faculty in the fall of 2004 and was recently awarded tenure. She teaches courses in criminal law, criminal procedure, evidence, legal profession and sentencing.

Prior to joining the law school, Hashimoto worked as an assistant federal public defender for four years in the Office of the Federal Public Defender in Washington, D.C. She also served as a judicial clerk for Judge David S. Tatel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and Judge Paul L. Friedman of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

Recent scholarship by Hashimoto includes "Toward Ethical Plea Bargaining" in the Cardozo Law Review, "The Price of Misdemeanor Representation" in the William and Mary Law Review and "Defending the Right of Self-Representation: An Empirical Look at the Pro Se Felony Defendant" in the North Carolina Law Review, which was relied upon by the U.S. Supreme Court in its opinion in Indiana v. Edwards.

She earned her bachelor's degree with honors from Harvard University and her law degree magna cum laude from the Georgetown University Law Center. At Georgetown, she served on the Georgetown Journal of Legal Ethics and was inducted into the Order of the Coif.

“Through teaching and through my scholarship, I hope to make the legal profession and, in particular, the practice of criminal law more just and more fair. My former students are now out there doing amazing things for the legal profession, and that makes me very proud.”

new titles

Robert P. Bartlett III

Associate Professor of Law
B.A., J.D., Harvard University

Robert P. Bartlett III was recently promoted to the rank of associate professor. Specializing in corporate finance and contracts, he has been at Georgia Law since 2005.

Previously, Bartlett served as a visiting assistant professor at the Fordham University School of Law. He was also a corporate associate in the Menlo Park, Calif., and Waltham, Mass., offices of Gunderson Dettmer Stough Villeneuve Franklin & Hachigian.

His primary research focuses on the intersection of finance and business law, with a particular emphasis on private equity transactions. Since entering the legal academy, Bartlett's scholarship has been published in journals such as the University of Chicago Law Review, the Fordham Law Review and the UCLA Law Review. He has also written and co-authored a number of practice-oriented guides for corporate law practitioners, including selections in The Business Lawyer and The Acquisition and Sale of the Emerging Growth Company: The M&A Exit.

Additionally, Bartlett is an advisory board member to the National Venture Capital Association Model Document Working Group, a consortium of lawyers responsible for drafting and maintaining the NVCA's model documents for venture capital financing transactions.

Bartlett earned his undergraduate degree magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa from Harvard University. He also earned his law degree from Harvard, where he graduated magna cum laude and served as a notes editor of the Harvard Law Review.

He is on leave during the 2009–10 academic year, visiting at the University of California at Berkeley School of Law.

“What I enjoy most about teaching law is witnessing when a student eventually realizes the level of precision required for legal analysis. Once that clicks, it's as if the student has suddenly learned a new and exciting language.”

Usha Rodrigues

Associate Professor of Law
B.A., Georgetown University
M.A., University of Wisconsin
J.D., University of Virginia

Usha Rodrigues has been promoted to the rank of associate professor. She teaches courses on contracts, the life cycle of a corporation and business associations.

Before joining the Georgia Law faculty in 2005, Rodrigues worked as a corporate associate with Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati in Reston, Va., where she specialized in corporate law and technology transactions. She also served as a judicial clerk for Judge Thomas L. Ambro of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 3rd Circuit.

Her scholarly interests lie in corporate law, corporate governance and corporate legal history. She recently published "From Loyalty to Conflict: Addressing Fiduciary Duty at the Officer Level" in the Florida Law Review. She has also published in the Journal of Corporation Law and the Washington & Lee Law Review. Her article, "Placebo Ethics," is forthcoming in the Virginia Law Review. She blogs at The Conglomerate and is a reporter for the ABA's Special Task Force on the Impact of the Troubled Asset Relief Program on Corporate Governance.

Rodrigues earned her bachelor's degree summa cum laude from Georgetown University, her master's degree in comparative literature summa cum laude from the University of Wisconsin and her Juris Doctor from the University of Virginia, where she served as editor in chief of the Virginia Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif.

“The people – the student body, my colleagues and our wonderful staff – make Georgia Law more than just a law school. It’s an incredible community, and I’m honored to be a part of it.”

new appointments

Matthew I. Hall

Assistant Professor of Law
B.A., The Johns Hopkins University
J.D., University of Michigan

Matthew I. Hall has joined the Georgia Law faculty as an assistant professor teaching Civil Procedure and Legal Profession. Previously, Hall was a visiting assistant professor at the University of the Pacific McGeorge School of Law and an adjunct professor at the University of California at Davis School of Law.

Before entering academia, Hall served as a judicial clerk for Judge David F. Levi of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of California and Judge Marsha S. Berzon of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit. He also practiced law for five years at Morrison & Foerster in San Francisco, specializing in complex commercial and appellate litigation.

In 2006, he left private practice to work as a special assistant to Judge Levi in his capacity as chair of the Judicial Conference of the United States' Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure. In this role, Hall was involved in the judiciary's ongoing project to revise and improve the procedural rules that govern litigation in federal courts.

Hall's research interests focus on federal jurisdiction and civil procedure. His article "The Partially Prudential Doctrine of Mootness" was recently published in the George Washington Law Review.

Hall earned his bachelor's degree cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa from The Johns Hopkins University. He then graduated cum laude from the University of Michigan Law School, where he was articles editor of the Michigan Law Review.

“ I was drawn to Civil Procedure and Legal Profession because they enable me to connect my experiences as a practitioner with my interests as a scholar. Both subjects address questions that are highly intellectually challenging, while also being of great practical significance to the profession. ”

Carol Morgan

Business Law and Ethics Program Instructor
B.A., Rhodes College
J.D., University of Georgia

Carol Morgan has joined Georgia Law to aid the school in the development of its Business Law and Ethics Program. Additionally, Morgan teaches transactional skills-based courses such as Business Negotiations and the Anatomy of a Mergers & Acquisitions Deal.

Morgan previously served as president of National Service Industries, where she enjoyed a 25-year career. Prior to becoming president, Morgan was a member of NSI's legal department and served as senior vice president, general counsel and secretary. Her particular areas of focus included mergers and acquisitions, corporate governance matters, corporate ethics and compliance programs as well as the management of complex litigation. She is currently serving as a consultant to the company on various matters, including litigation.

Before her career at NSI, Morgan practiced for two years as an associate with Cofer, Beauchamp, Hawes and Brown in Atlanta. While in private practice, she co-authored two books on probate law and guardianship law in Georgia. Recently, she served as editor of Ignorance is No Defense, A Teenager's Guide to Georgia Law (authored by former DeKalb County, Ga., District Attorney J. Tom Morgan).

Morgan earned her bachelor's degree in history with distinction from Rhodes College and her Juris Doctor cum laude from the University of Georgia.

“Now I have another dream job – transferring my experience as a practicing attorney into the classroom, being surrounded by outstanding students and colleagues who constantly challenge me, and serving the law school which inspired and served me.”

visiting faculty

Leah Ward Sears

Visiting Professor of Law
B.S., Cornell University
J.D., Emory University
LL.M., University of Virginia

Former Supreme Court of Georgia Chief Justice Leah Ward Sears is serving as a visiting professor at Georgia Law for the 2009–10 academic year, teaching a course on contemporary issues in family law.

When Sears was appointed to the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1992, she was the first woman and youngest person ever to serve on its bench. She became presiding justice in 2001 and was named chief justice in 2005, making her the first African-American female chief justice in the country. Sears held this post until retiring in June 2009. Her previous judicial experience included service on the Superior Court of Fulton County as well as the City Court of Atlanta. She has also practiced law as an attorney at Alston & Bird in Atlanta.

In addition to teaching at Georgia Law, Sears has begun a one-year term at the Institute for American Values in a fellowship post bearing her late brother's name – William Thomas Sears. She will also soon join Schiff Hardin in Atlanta as a member of its Litigation Group.

William B. Chandler III has joined Georgia Law for the fall 2009 semester as a visiting professor teaching Advanced Corporations.

Since 1997, he has served as the chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery, a position he was appointed to after serving for eight years as a vice chancellor of the court. From 1985 to 1989, Chandler was a resident judge of the Superior Court of Delaware. His legal experience also includes working as an associate at Morris, Nichols, Arsht & Tunnell and as legal counsel to former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV. Additionally, Chandler has taught at a number of law schools including Vanderbilt University, Washington University in St. Louis and The Ohio State University.

Chandler is a member of the American Law Institute, the Board of Advisors of the Yale Law School Corporate Law Center and the Third Year Advisory Board of Washington and Lee University School of Law as well as a trustee of the Weinberg Center for Corporate Governance at the University of Delaware.

Miriam A. Cherry

Visiting Associate Professor of Law
B.A., Dartmouth College
J.D., Harvard University

Miriam A. Cherry is serving as a visiting professor at Georgia Law for the fall 2009 semester, teaching Contracts and Corporations. She comes to the University of Georgia from the University of the Pacific McGeorge School of Law, where she specializes in business associations, contracts and employment law.

After graduating from law school, Cherry served as a judicial clerk for Justice Roderick L. Ireland of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and Judge Gerald W. Heaney of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit. She later joined the Boston firm Foley Hoag, where she practiced corporate law with an emphasis on mergers and acquisitions, venture capital and private debt financing. Cherry was also an associate at Berman DeValerio.

Her scholarship is interdisciplinary and focuses on the intersection of technology and globalization with business and employment law topics. She is the co-author of the book Global Issues in Employment Law and her articles on markets and executive compensation have appeared in the Northwestern University Law Review, the Minnesota Law Review and the University of Illinois Law Review, among others.

Scott H. Hughes

Visiting Professor of Law
B.A., Arizona State University
J.D., Creighton University
LL.M., Temple University

Scott H. Hughes, who specializes in the field of conflict resolution, has joined the Georgia Law faculty for the 2009–10 academic year. He is assisting with the Civil Clinic as well as leading courses on arbitration and theory of conflict. Hughes is visiting from the University of New Mexico School of Law, where he is a professor and the director of the school's alternative dispute resolution program.

As an accomplished mediator, Hughes has handled cases involving commercial interests, employment disputes, divorce, personal injury and land use issues. Additionally, Hughes has trained more than 1,000 mediators across the United States. He is currently working on a mediation program in Hungary. He also frequently teaches at the Dispute Resolution Institute at the Hamline University School of Law in St. Paul, Minn.

Hughes is the co-author of The Art of Mediation, which is a leading text for mediation training, and the author of articles such as "Understanding Conflict in a Postmodern World" in the Marquette Law Review and "Mediator Immunity: The Misguided and Inequitable Shifting of Risk" in the Oregon Law Review.

Frederic F. Manget

Visiting Professor of Law
A.B., University of Georgia
M.A., University of Oxford
J.D., Vanderbilt University

Frederic F. Manget is teaching Intelligence Law as a visiting professor at Georgia Law this fall. He comes to UGA after serving for 22 years in the Central Intelligence Agency.

Manget joined the CIA in 1986, where he spent most of his career as a legal adviser in the Office of General Counsel. He was promoted into the Senior Intelligence Service in 1995, where he achieved the rank of SIS-4. In 2002, he received the Attorney General's Distinguished Service Award for support of the prosecutions for the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He has also received the Department of Justice Public Service Award. Having published several articles on intelligence and the law, Manget won the Studies in Intelligence Award in 1995.

Prior to joining the CIA, he was an associate with various private law firms in Atlanta. In addition, he served in the U.S. Army Reserve Judge Advocate General's Corps, retiring after 32 years with the rank of colonel. While in the reserves, Manget received a Meritorious Service Medal for work done in reorganizing CIA support to the military reserves.

Richard J. Peltz

Visiting Professor of Law
B.A., Washington and Lee University
J.D., Duke University

Richard J. Peltz, a faculty member at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock, is serving as a visiting professor for the 2009–10 academic year. While at Georgia Law, he is instructing in the areas of torts and freedom of information law.

Peltz also specializes in constitutional law, communications law and the First Amendment. He has served as a visiting professor at the Catholic University of America and has taught in both the School of Law and the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at UALR. Prior to entering academia, Peltz was an associate at what has become the Venable law firm in Baltimore, Md., where he focused on commercial litigation including defamation, mass torts, discrimination, insurance defense and appeals.

His research primarily focuses on media law. He is the co-author of the fourth edition of the treatise The Arkansas Freedom of Information Act and the third edition of the casebook Tort & Injury Law. In 2007, Peltz received UALR's Faculty Excellence Award for Research. He was also recognized in 2006 by the Arkansas Press Association with its Freedom of Information Award.

Kim Van der Borgh

Visiting Professor of Law
LL.B., LL.M., Aggr., Ph.D., Free University of Brussels
Pg.D., University of West England

Kim Van der Borgh has joined Georgia Law for the fall 2009 semester as a visiting professor teaching International Economics. He comes to the School of Law from the University of Brussels Centre for Economic Law & Governance, where he also teaches courses on international commercial arbitration, trade and business law, and commercial law.

Van der Borgh is an accredited arbitrator (CEPINA), a member of the International Trade Law Committee for the International Law Association and is listed on the governmental roster of panelists for the World Trade Organization. He is also an independent adviser for the Strategic Council on the International Relations of the Flemish Region, a governmental advisory body.

His scholarly interests include the law and policy of international and regional organizations dealing with international trade. His latest book, Legal Nature of WTO Dispute Settlement, was published earlier this year. Additionally, Van der Borgh is on the editorial board for Human Rights and International Legal Discourse and is a corresponding editor for International Legal Materials.

Digital Commons serves as e-source for research

Georgia Law's librarians and digital repository, Digital Commons, are leading the way for other educational institutions, particularly law schools, with this new resource for archiving information. It contains the latest research by Georgia Law faculty as well as digital versions of recent lectures, presentations and conferences. Initiated in 2006, this growing database now contains close to 1,000 files. Access is free at digitalcommons.law.uga.edu.
