MSW/JD PROGRAM OF STUDY

MSW/JD candidates must complete the first and second years of Law School study consecutively (Years A and B below.) MSW/JD candidates are encouraged to complete all required Law School courses, including the Law and Ethics of Lawyering, by the end of the second year of Law School study (Year B.) Although Law School courses may be taken in the third or fourth year, there is the risk of a required course conflicting with the School of Social Work schedule and interfering with the timely completion of the program.

MSW/JD candidates who start in the Law School must complete the program in a sequence of years ABCD. Candidates who start in the School of Social Work must complete the programs in a sequence of years CABD. In year D, candidates must take Advanced Field Education in the School of Social Work in both semesters; candidates may also be able to get Law School credit for field work in this course through a Law School clinic or externship. Advanced standing MSW students must complete the programs in a sequence of years ABD. Pursuant to ABA standard 311(d), the coursework completed prior to JD matriculation will count towards the Masters degree and not the JD.

Dual degree candidates should meet with their faculty advisor for each program at least once each academic year.

Total Credits:

- Social work credits: 51 with 9 credits of law courses counting as 3 electives
- Law credits: At least 74
To complete the J.D. degree, dual degree students must:

- earn six credits in an experiential course in years B or D
- complete a capstone writing experience in years B or D.
- complete 64 credits in courses that qualify as regularly scheduled class sessions or direct faculty instruction at the Law School.
- notify the law registrar of their dual degree status during the fall of Year A, before enrolling in electives for the spring of year A.

Tuition and Scholarship

Dual degree students pay the Law School tuition rate for Years A, B, and D and students are only eligible for the Graduate School tuition rate for Year C. Any scholarships awarded by the School of Law would be applied to Years A, B, and D, and dual degree students are eligible for an assistantship only in Year C.
