

PROMOTIONS

Chapman becomes an associate professor

Nathan S. Chapman was promoted to associate professor with tenure. He writes about due process, religious freedom, and Christianity and the law.

Since joining the School of Law faculty in 2013, he has taught Federal Courts, Constitutional Law, Law & Religion, Law & Ethics of Lawyering, History of the Common Law, Georgia Practice & Procedure and Comparative Constitutional Law.

His scholarship has been published in the Northwestern University Law Review, the Washington Law Review, the Alabama Law Review, the William & Mary Bill of Rights Journal, the University of Illinois Law Review and the Yale Law Journal.

Chapman currently serves as the chair of the Law and Religion Section of the Association of American Law Schools. Before coming to UGA, he was the executive director of Stanford Law School's Constitutional Law Center.

Margaret V. Sachs retires

After nearly 30 years on the School of Law faculty, Margaret V. Sachs, the holder of the Robert Cotten Alston Chair in Corporate Law, retired on May 31.

A native of Washington, D.C., she received her undergraduate and law degrees from Harvard University. Upon graduation, she clerked for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and practiced briefly with a large Wall Street law firm.

She came to UGA in 1990 and taught Securities Regulation, Securities Litigation and Enforcement, Corporations and a Corporations Seminar.

She is the author of numerous law review articles on securities litigation and enforcement as well as the co-author of the first casebook on that subject, the fourth edition of which was published in 2017. In 2010, the Supreme Court cited her article on transnational securities fraud.

A member of the American Law Institute, she served on the executive committees of the Association of American Law Schools Section on Corporations, the AALS Section on Securities Regulation and the National Business Law Scholars Conference.

Librarians named associate directors

Maureen A. Cahill (J.D.'79), Wendy E. Moore and Thomas "T.J." Striepe were promoted to associate director positions within the Alexander Campbell King Law Library.

Cahill became the library's associate director for instruction, access, and outreach earlier this year. In this role, she oversees the library's circulation department, assists faculty and students with research and technology, teaches a number of research classes and coordinates library services for students. Her teaching portfolio includes: Legal Research, Advanced Legal Research, Georgia Legal Research and Technology Skills for Practice.

Before joining the law library faculty in 1997, Cahill served as a staff attorney and clinical instructor for the law school's Prisoner Legal Counseling Project for 16 years. Her B.A. is from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, her J.D. is from UGA and her M.L.I.S. is from the University of South Carolina. Cahill is a member of the American Association of Law Libraries.

Moore currently holds the title of associate director for collection services and oversees the acquisition, cataloging and access of all library research materials and the fiscal management of all library materials expenditures.

Before joining the library in 1999, she was the serials librarian at Furman University's J.B. Duke Library in Greenville, S.C. Moore is professionally involved with the American Association of Law Libraries, currently serving as the vice chair/chair-elect of its Technical Services Special Interest Section.

She earned her bachelor's from Gustavus Adolphus College and her master's in library science from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Striepe was named the library's associate director for research services making him the primary liaison between the law library and the law school's faculty. He manages the Current Awareness Program, which helps faculty members stay informed of new developments in their fields, and he supervises the library's Research Assistant Program. He teaches Legal Research, Advanced Legal Research and Business Law Research.

He joined the library's staff in 2011 after serving as a Law Librarian Fellow at the University of Arizona College of Law and practicing law with the firm Courey, Kosanda & Zimmer in Minnesota.

He earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Iowa; his J.D. magna cum laude from Arizona State University, where he was inducted into the Order of the Coif; and his master's degree from the University of Arizona.